Meet Michael Seeley

Michael Seeley was born in Indiana and as a youngster was dragged around on the West Coast by his parents for a few years before the family settled in the Cincinnati area. He received degrees in architecture at Miami University back when Jimmy Carter was wearing cardigan sweaters by the White House fireplace, and has worked as a registered architect ever since. Largely self-taught in art until lately, he is currently a Master of Fine Arts candidate at Miami University, with an emphasis on painting. He has previously exhibited at the Architectural Foundation of Cincinnati, and his most recent show was at the Oxford Community Arts Center (Oxford, Ohio) in August 2012.
